He was in good humor today and evidently satisfied with the progress of the army. He predicts that the army will be vastly swelled in numbers before the threshold of the capital city is reached. "The people of this country," he said, "are behind this movement," and to substantiate that statement he called the attention of his hearers to the reception given to the detachments of the army at Ogcen, Omaha, and at Cumberland, Md.

Mr. Breckinridge Announces His Intention of Pressing an Appeal.

HE APPEARS IN CONGRESS TODAY

Miss Pollard Prostrated by Nervous Reaction.

MORALS OF CONGRESSMEN

It was to the satisfaction of the commu nity generally that the long-drawn-out Pollard-Breckinridge case came to an end on Saturday afternoon. A verdict for plaintiff for $15,000 damages was returned to the court at half-past 4 o'clock, an hour and a half after the jury retired, and the news was spread through the city by an extra Star, which appeared upon the streets a few minutes after the decision of the jury was announced in the court. That the jury was out such a short time was a surprise to every one who had watched the progress of the case closely. It was the general opinion that they would be out for several hours, and that in the end a sealed verdict would be rendered, which would not have been opened until this morning. Miss Pollard was in the office of her attorneys, Messrs. Carlisle and Johnson, when the news of her victory reached her, and she is said to have received it with less of demon-stration than one would have expected of such a nervous woman, who had been under the hardest kind of a strain for a long time past.

The reaction came shortly after, however, and she was at once sent to Providence Hospital, where she could have the rest and attention she needed to recuperate. She is there now and has persistently declined all requests for interviews. The reason she gives is a simple one; she has nothing to say beyond what has already been said. She denies the story that she is contemplating going upon the stage or the lecture platform, and others who are in position to know insist that there is no truth in the atory.

Miss Pollard's Future. The theory that she might seclude herself hereafter in some religious institution is also regarded as having no more foundation. One of her lawyers today told a Star reporter that he hoped that the interest which her case had aroused would eventually open up for her some field of usefulness, ly open up for her some field of usefulness, where she might, as far as possible, live down the memory of the pest ten years. That she is a wonderfully bright and clever woman no one can deny who saw her day after day during the course of the trial. During the days when she was on the stand, especially when she was being cross-examined by Mr. Butterworth, she underwent such a trying ordeal as falls to the lot of few women. If she ever applies her genious and ability to bome career in life, there is every reason to believe she will make a success.

believe she will make a success.

Some question has been raised as to whether Miss Pollard will ever get any money out of the case, even if the judgment is finally affirmed. Mr. Breckinridge is said to have no success. eve she will make a su to have no property in this jurisdiction which could be levied upon, an it is not known that he has any property in Kentucky that could be affected by a suit there to satisfy the judgment. Of course the defense do not regard the case as closed by any means. Mr. Breckinridge is a ca any means. Mr. Breckinridge is a candidate for re-election to Congress and expresses himself as confident that he will be returned by a majority that will show that his constituents have not lost faith in him. For this reason, if for no other, he will have to fight the case to the bitter end.

When a Star reporter saw Mr. Breckingde this marriage has a star forming he was just continuous.

Mr. Breckinridge at the Capitol. Mr. Breckinridge of Kentucky appeared on the floor of the House of Representatives today for the first time since the famous Breckinridge-Pollard trial began in he will give careful attention to anything court. He reached the Capitol shortly before the session opened and went first to new phase of the case. the appropriations committee room, where he exchanged greetings with members of There was no allusio the litigation and merely the usual expressions as to good health. Then he passed through the lobby to Speaker Crisp's private office, where Representative Hen of North Carolina was consulting with Speaker as to the resolutions of respect to Senator Vance. There were brief ex-changes of good wishes and again a careful avoidance of personal affairs. Mr. Breckinridge passed into the private lobby of the House, where he encountered many members. They shook his hand in passing. There was nothing, however, in the way of a demonstration or unusual providing about him.

Mr. Breckinridge went on the floor just s the chaplain was concluding his prayer and stood with bowed head at the closing words. Then he walked across the front area, grasping a hand here and there, and proceeded up the aisle to his seat.

Members were busy with their work and many failed to notice him. Three or four own men in the immediate neighborood of his seat leaned over and shook his hand. He wore a smile, but was evidently miserable and ill at ease under the ordeal. His face was florid and seemed to be more than usually flushed. There was little about him of that old-time composure and nonchamee so characteristic of his earlier congressional days.

Before he had been in his seat two min-ntes he shifted nervously and then arose and left the chamber. The House soon after took a recess.

Mr. Breckinridge said he would at once renan of the appropriations subcommittee on deficiencies. The urgent deficiency bill pass-ed the Senate Saturday and came back to the House today. Mr. Breckinridge said he expected to resume charge of it. He will also manage the general deficiency bill,

Representatives of several female organitations met at Willards' Hotel Saturday hight, and after an interesting conference adopted resolutions calling upon Congress to consider the qualifications of Representative Breckinridge for membership in that body. Some of the organizations whose representatives took part in the meeting were the Weman's Suffrage Association, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Pro Ra Nata. This meeting was the last of a series which prominent women of Washington have been holding since Good Friday, which has resulted in the formation of an organization called the Womans' Protective League.

The resolutions which were adopted Saturday evening declared "That we, daughters, wives and mothers of the commonwealth, express our belief that types of wealth, express our belief that types of the highest manhood are to be found in Congress; therefore, we ask in full confi-dence that the House of Representatives shall join in the sentiment now presented by us and take some definite action to insure the high character of our country's administration, and help the future national councils to present a clean and unchallenged body of legislators."

The Costs of the Suit. In recovering the judgment of $15,000, Miss Pollard, of course, secured in addition a judgment for the costs of the suit. These costs, while quite heavy, do not include counsel fees, the pay of the jurors, or the stenographic record of the case. Each party cost of the stenographic record, while the government pays the jurors, the pay of the latter not being taxed in the costa. Therefore, the costs which go with the judgment against the unsuccessful party include only what are known as docket fees, the pay of witnesses and the expenses incidental to the taking of depositions. Witnesses received to $1.25 a day, and where they are summoned from outside the District their transportation here and back, and their hotel expenses while here, are also paid. Clerk Hodges while here, are also paid. Clerk Hodges while here, are also paid. Clerk Hodges said today that while he had not yet ascertained the costs in the case, they would be very large.

THE ARMOR PLATE FRAUDS

No New Evidence Submitted to the Secretary of the Navy.

A Belief That the Promised Informa tion Has Already Been Discounted.

Although it was stated in several newspa per publications this morning that Attorney Wallace of Pittsburg was to call at the Navy Department this morning with a collection of new evidence to show that great frauds had been practiced on the government in connection with naval armor steel contracts, the attorney did not appear up till noon. Six weeks ago Mr. Wallace wrote Secretary Herbert that he had such evidence and he was twice invited to submit it, but nothing has been heard from him lately and the Secretary had no appointment with Mr. Wallace for today, or for any date in fact.

Although it is stated that the vidence any date in fact.

Although it is stated that the 'vidence referred to concerns frauds no touched upon in the former investigation, there is very good ground for the belief that the irformers are in error upon this point, and that, as a matter of fact, these new charges are likely to amount to very little. No concealment is made of the purpose of the informers, for it is stated in the publications that they are aware of the handsome amount of $35,000 divided by the few men who gave the information upon which the President assessed the damages and penalties upon the Carnegle Company.

It is assumed that they may have information of defects in armor plates that were not specifically described by the first informers, and it is for this information they wish to be remunerated. But the weakness of their case lies in the fact that all such information has already been discounted by the Navy Department. The explanation made in this matter is as follows: When Secretary Herbert charged Capt. When Secretary Herbert charged Capt. Sampson, the chief of ordnance, to make the first investigation his board, with the purpose of making it thorough, went back to the beginning of the plate making, and so covered the period from the summer of 1892 down to last autumn, when the mode of procedure at the mills was not covered.

mode of procedure at the mills was so changed as to make further fraudulent changed as to make further fraudulent practices impossible.

In making up the report Capt .Sampson did not stop at the plates which were shown clearly to have been defective. He went much further, and, notwithstanding the protest of the company's agents, he fixed the penalties and assessed damages upon the assumption that every lot of plates made during the period covered by the investigation contained the same percentage of defects. So, if the evidence collected by Attorney Wallace and exBurgess McLuckie of Homestead relates to any plates made since the summer of 1892, and that is practically all of the plates, it would simply confirm the department's it would simply confirm the department's No further penalties could be assessed for already these plates have been penal-ized, and the informers could receive no monetary consideration. Still, as Secretary Herbert is desirous of missing no oppor-tunity to learn all of the facts in the case,

THE SEAL LIMIT.

Secretary Carlisle Will Give a Hearing on the Subject Shortly.

Secretary Carlisle has not yet reached a decision as to the number of sealskins the North American Commercial Company should be permitted to take during the coming season, and at the request of counsel for the company has decided to give a hearing on the subject at an early date. The exact date for this hearing has not yet been agreed upon, but it is expected to take place within the next few days, as the sealing season is now so near at hand. Last year the Secretary acceded to the insistent contention of the British government and limited the catch to 7,500, barely enough to supply the natives with food, but there are reasons for the belief that this number will be materially increased for the approaching season. It is believed that the operations season. It is believed that the operations of the company under last year's limitation were conducted at a financial loss, and it is crease the number which may be taken this year if he can do so without seriously interfering with the natural increase of the herds. It is the opinion of some persons interested in the matter that as many as 30,000 skins will be permitted to be taken this season but this to be followed by the season but the season but the bereily probable in this season, but this is hardly probable, in view of the fact that the government agent at the seal islands has reported that, in his opinion, 20,000 is the very highest number hat can safely be authorized. The general opinion is that this number (20,000) likely be finally settled upon.

Congressman Simpson's condition is growing worse since last Saturday. He is much weaker today and is suffering intense pain. The rheumatism, which has heretofore been confined to his ankles, has now advanced to his knees. "I want to give myself up," said John Morgan, a respectable looking young colored man, when he entered Lieut. Kelly's police station about 10 o'clock Saturday night. "For what?" inquired the station clerk.

"I had some trouble with Howard Smith," he replied, "and I cut him in self defense."

The fatal tragedy occurred in the Harrison flat, corner of 3d and G streets northwest, the building lately occupied by the superintendent of the census. Howard Smith was employed as cook in the cafe in the flat several months ago, but Morgan and Scott Smith, brother of deceased, were friends, and some weeks ago, when Morgan wanted to get his laundry and did not have the money, he borrowed fifty cents from Scott Smith, giving him a gold ring to hold as security. They made a bargain that Scott should pay $3 in event of his losing the ring.

a bargain that Scott should pay $3 in event of his losing the ring.

He seemed to have lost the piece of jewelry, but did not pay the money. The men had several interviews about the ring and money, but failed to reach a settlement, and one day when Scott called on Morgan and left his guitar in the room Morgan hid it and was holding it to secure the $3.

The Fatal Stab. Howard Smith interested himself in his brother's behalf and Saturday night he called at the flat to have it out or settle the affair, as he said. The men then discussed the matter, quarreled and the knife was used. After receiving the fatal cut Smith ran across the street to the drug store, and then he returned to the street. John Morgan, who was in charge of the elevator, said he wanted to go on an errand for a lady, and witness ran the elevator for him.

Witness was enjoying his cigar in the elevator when Howard Smith came in and got into a discussion about a guitar. At first they did not seem angry, and, indeed, witness paid no attention to them until they indulged in personalities. He remained in the elevator, and when the bell rang he pulled the rope and went up, leaving the negroes in the corridor discussing their difference. Earl Goodman went across the street for some ice cream, and when he street for some ice cream, and when he came back the negroes engaged in the fatal encounter.
"I thought at first that they were only fooling," said the witness, "but when I lowered the elevator I saw Smith crowding Morgan to the wall. Soon afterward they separated and Smith went out the door. Morgan followed him, and then, when I saw blood on the floor, I became frightened."

Witness had known the colored men a short while, but was not well acquainted with either of them. "Did either of them appear to have been drinking?

"I think not."
Witness did not remember whether Mor gan was wearing his overcoat or not. He saw the hat and coat in the corner some time after the trouble was over.

Dr. Schneffer's Testimony. Dr. E. M. Schaeffer, who is the assistant coroner, described the dead man as a very athletic young man. The fatal wound, he said, was a knife cut of the left thigh. The direction was inward and upward, and witness probed the wound three inches. The artery and veins were severed and there was also a slight cut in the back. Hem-orrhage of the wound in the thigh caused death and the wound was necessarily fatal.
Witness also found scars on the face and knee, which were perhaps made by the fall. In the clothing of deceased witness found cuts corresponding with those in the man's body.

His death shocks us to the depths of our hearts. It with yet higher aspirations and promise of doing good, physically wrecked and overcome with incurable maladies, he stood firmly in the line of his comrades and serenely gathered his robes around him at the last moment and stepped from earth to eternity with the dignity of a Senator and the faith of a Christian.

He has been the most beloved and most honored son of the great state of North Carolina. From the ever-flowing ocean agrees the hills and volcine.

Carolina. From the ever-flowing ocean across the hills and plains and valleys to the majectic mountain tops he was a familiar and most dear object in the hearts and homes of all our people.

Standing by his lifeless form today it is committee appointed at Saturday night's my sacred duty, representing a common-wealth of nearly two million souls, to shed upon his mortal ashes the tears of their affection and deepest sorrow. At this moment the throbbing hearts of thoureception to the commonweal when it this moment the throbbing hearts of thou-sands are following his silent march to the tomb. As I think of the short interval at which he follows the beloved Georgian from the folding doors of this chamber to the last rest it looks as if the two tall oaks which stood over and shaded our hearthstones had fallen in the early evenin a grand parade on the day in question and receive Mr. Coxey and his hosts in and receive Mr. Coxey and his hosts in proper shape.

A letter was also sent to Coxey, asking him to address a mass meeting here next Saturday night, and in case a favorable reply is received Convention Hall or some other large auditorium will be secured for the purpose. It was also decided to appoint committees to provide for the accommodation and support of the commonweal during its stay in Washington. The committee will hold another meeting tomorrow. ing after the storms and heat of the day had passed over and before the shades of night and winter had fallen upon their autumnal leaves. As a further mark of respect the Senate took a recess until 3:30 this afternoon. Lying in State.

The marble room of the Senate was prepared to receive the remains of the late Senator Vance during the forenoon today. The decorations consisted largely of potted pines, of rare Australian varieties from the Botannical Garden, which were selected because of the fact that the pine is the principal forest tree of North Carolina. There were also placed in the room a num-be of flowers, the Vice President being among the contributors of these. The Bo-tannical Garden also furnished a cross of varda and catleya orchids, the rarest flowers now in bloom there. The body lay in state in the marble room from 2:30 until 3:30 o'clock.
